

Current Research (2020)

Clean Break is currently undertaking a few research projects. The first of which is a Heritage Project Archive of the company at the Bishopsgate Institute which is now available to view. There will also be an exhibition of the archive in the new year. To book a place to view the archive, contact Bishopsgate.

The recording of the launch event for the archive is available on our website. The online event called Efemera: The Origins and Survival of Clean Break Theatre Company, focuses on the first 10 years of the company and the artistic and academic work being made now inspired by the archive.

Clean Break is also the subject of a two-year research project funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council into Clean Break's practice and the unique way the company operates. The project Women, Theatre, Justice is an interdisciplinary project exploring the history of the company in relation to its distinctive organisational practices, spatial geographies, and performance legacies.

Applied Theatre: Women and the Criminal Justice System, (Feb 2020), by Dr Caoimhe McAvinchey, offers unprecedented access to international theatre and performance practice in carceral contexts and the material and political conditions that shape this work. Extracts of performance texts, developed with Clean Break theatre company, are interwoven through the collection.

Anna Herrmann and Dr Caoimhe McAvinchey have co-written a chapter on Clean Break's 2019 production, Inside Bitch: "Inside Bitch: Clean Break and the ethics of representation of women in the criminal justice system" for Applied Theatre Reader (2nd Edition) edited by Tim Prentki & Nicola Abraham. It is now available to purchase:

A group of Clean Break Members' poetry, text and short plays were published as a chapter under the title "Our Voices Should Be Heard" in The Monument Fellowship's 2019 Crime and Consequence: What should happen to people who commit criminal offences? It is now available to purchase: <https://www.koestlerarts.org.uk/shop/books/crime-and-consequence-2/>

Anna Herrmann was interviewed in 2019 on the work of Clean Break in Equal Stages: Standing Up for Identity and Integrity in the Performing Arts, Volume 1 - What Now? Beyond Diversity and Inclusion by Nick Awde.

Clean Break is one of the theatre companies studied in Performing Welfare: Applied Theatre, Unemployment, and Economies of Participation by Sarah Bartley, published in 2020.

Anna Herrmann was interviewed on the work of Clean Break for a chapter on women's theatre for the 2018 publication: Scenes from the Revolution Making Political Theatre 1968-2018, edited by Kim Wiltshire, Billy Cowan.

Rebecca Manley, former Assistant Head of Education (Learning) carried out some research for her MA Social Justice and Education at the Institute of Education in 2012. Her dissertation looks at theatre practice in Clean Break's former education programme from a post-structuralist feminist perspective. It is available as a pdf if you email our Members Assistant at participation@cleanbreak.org.uk

"The Mothership", a piece by Anna Herrmann, former Head of Education at Clean Break and now Joint Artistic Director, offers insight into the experience of a group of women on the former education programme (1993-2017). It appears as a chapter in The Applied Theatre Reader (2008), Prentki, T. and Preston, S. (eds) published by Routledge.

The Arts Alliance evidence library (www.artsevidence.org.uk) is an online resource containing evaluations, reports and academic research on arts projects within the criminal justice system. Articles can be searched using a number of criteria including institution, art form, participant profile and date. The library contains a wide range of relevant research including six pieces relating specifically to the work of Clean Break. Five of these can be found using the following link: <http://artsevidence.org.uk/evaluations/?participantgender=1>
